Hebrew Committee Of National Liberation Registers In U. S. As Foreign Agent

The twenty-nine-day-old Hebrew Committee of National Liberation announced in Washington, on June 15, that it had registered with the foreign agents registration section of the Justice Department—eighteen days after expiration of the deadline set in the regulations under the Act.

According to the registration the Hebrew nation "consists of those Jews in Palestine and occupied Europe who desire to belong to it," and does not include Jews who are citizens of other nations such as the United States.

The committee, which has brought and refurnished a former embassy building on Massachusetts Avenue in Washington, D.C., said that "so far as we know" there is no other organization which purports to represent the "Hebrew nation," though there are organizations which speak for the "Jewish people."

The registration said the committee's total assets were $10,000 received from the Free Palestine Committee and $15,000 borrowed from the Palestine Defense Fund. Application has been made to the Securities and Exchange Commission for authority to publish a loan.

No explanation of delay in filing in the ten-day period plus one day of grace allowed after the committee became subject to the act was given in a committee statement which said it was "only logical" that it register, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

Meanwhile, a Justice Department spokesman revealed that the immigration status of Peter H. Bergson, chairman of the committee, is pending before the board of immigration appeals. Mr. Bergson has already appeared before the district office of the immigration service concerning his visitor's visa, which expired on July 7, 1941.

It is understood that the invitation in registering under the act will not be prosecuted by the criminal division of the Justice Department as the delay is not considered a "willful violation" of the statute.

The committee defined the "foreign principal" which it represented as the Hebrew nation, which "consists of those Jews in Pales-

Life Of Winter Was Success Story

Benjamin Winter, a noted real estate operator in New York, and leader of the Polish group of U.S. Jews, who in the past forty years had made and lost fortunes running into many millions, died in his home, 200 Riverside Drive. His age was 68.

Born in Lodz, Poland, a son of Michael and Beatrice Ohmer Winter, he came to the U.S. in 1891.

PROTEST REMARK LAID TO PREMIER OF HUNGARY

A protest against the statement purportedly made by Dome Sztojay, Premier of Jews was voiced at a conference of forty educators and clergymen of Hungarian descent at the Hotel Biltmore, in New York.

The Rev. Victor Kovalicsky, pastor of Holy Cross Church, 312 East Eighty-second Street, introduced a resolution asking Pope Pius XII to issue a statement condemning "the Hungarian government and other nations persecuting the Jews."

The purported statement of Premier Sztojay was heard in a short-wave broadcast to Hungarians in the United States. He was quoted as saying: "We eliminate the Jews in order to make a good place for you in Hungary so that you may return to the old country after the war."

Wise Says Fascist Peril Concerns Post-War Work

Telling the U.S. House Labor Committee that there is a "real Fascist peril in America," Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress, said that failure to establish a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission would multiply post-war employment difficulties.

America's "Fascist peril," he declared, takes the form of discrimination against Negroes, Jews, Catholics and foreign-born citizens.

"The FEPC has done a most worthwhile work. It has made millions of Americans feel that our Government is not only fighting for democracy in Yugoslavia but is preparing to battle for democracy at home."

Replying to a question of Representative O. C. Fisher, Democrat, of Texas, he said that he would rather take from the employer the right to hire and fire than to take "from any man" the right to employment.

No fundamental American right was being violated by Government prohibition against denial of employment on grounds of race, religion or nationality, Dr. Wise asserted.

Palestine Doctors Develop Healer

Drs. L. Dolgoniki, H. Warner and W. Schiben, of the Hebrew University of Palestine, have developed a promising wound-healer with which medical authorities of the United States, Great Britain and the Allies are experimenting. Treatment with the new agent is based on the discovery of Dr. Alexis Carrel that organs can be kept alive in glass if perfused with extracts of embryonic tissues.

Dr. Dolgoniki and his colleagues have been experimenting with extracts of the adult brain, heart and other organs, and muscles. Hearts of adult chickens seem to hold out hope that they can heal effectively wounds that do not respond readily to the usual agents. Among clues are the lesions of tuberculosis and of osteomyelitis, which is an infectious inflammation of the bone marrow.

A method of speeding up production of penicillin, used in the treatment of infections, was revealed by Dr. Baruch Levin at the annual meeting of the Palestine Micro-biological Society in Jerusalem.

He said the process produced crude penicillin in about an hour, compared with two days required by usual methods.

In experiments of over a year at Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Dr. Levin and his collaborators used an apparatus which he said produced quantities commercially every few minutes.

Italians Helped Jews In Nazi Terror

On the day of their evacuation from Rome the Germans packed 1,500 Italian Jews into sealed trains and sent them to human slaughter houses in Poland, it was declared by Dr. Joseph Herman Hertz, chief rabbi at a meeting in London, England, of the Council of Christians and Jews.

Recent reports showed that thousands of other Jews in Greece had been sent to a similar fate and that 60,000 Jewish refugees had been deported from Hungary, said Dr. Hertz, who seconded a resolution proposed by the Archbishop of Canterbury expressing concern at the increasing peril to Jewish communities as a result of the recent extension of Nazi domination of central and southeastern Europe.

The chief rabbi of Rome, Anton Zolli, publicly expressed the gratitude of the Jews of Rome toward the Roman Catholic church and especially Pope Pius XII for aid given to Jews persecuted by the Nazis and Fascists during the German occupation of Rome. Speaking in his synagogue Rabbi Zolli said that on many occasions the Pontiff personally interceded in favor of the victims of the Nazis thus saving their lives or getting a mitigation of their penalties.

Many moving stories of the tortures, death and humiliation suffered by the Jews during the nine-month reign of Nazi terror have been told, and many others of kindness and even intercession at great risk by non-Jewish Italians. Observers I have talked with agree with Rabbi Zolli that Pius and the Vatican acted indefatigable in working to save the Jews and many hundreds

$16,000,000 Raised Is Half Of Rescue Quota

The United Jewish Appeal for Refugees, Overseas Needs and Palestine reported that half the $32,000,000 quota of a nation-wide campaign for world-wide rescue and rehabilitation had been raised in the first five months of 1944.

The report on the status of the campaign was made at a meeting of the organization's executive committee in the Biltmore Hotel. The United Jewish Appeal is the combined fund-raising agency for three major organizations: the Joint Distribution Committee, the United Palestine Appeal and the National Refugee Service.

The report, submitted by Henry Monsky and Isidor Coons, executive vice-chairmen of the United Jewish Appeal, stressed the point that even greater needs will face the organizations in the immediate future. The reasons for it were outlined as the increasing danger of mass extermination of Jews by the Nazis, the financial help required to finance the large-scale rescue measures initiated by the President's War Refugee Board and the added need for the rescue and rehabilitation of large numbers of Jews in Europe as more areas are being liberated.

Over 50,000 Jews Entered Palestine In Past Five Years

More than 50,000 Jews have entered Palestine since the outbreak of the war in September 1939, according to figures made public by the Jewish Agency Executive in Jerusalem. The latest arrivals are a group of 317 Jewish refugees from Rumania who reached Palestine by overland route from Turkey. They included 14 families of veteran Zionists and Chief Rabbi Shafan, of Jassy. Another group that reached the shores of Palestine in recent weeks was composed of 30 Greek Jews who escaped from Nazi-occupied Greece, making their way to Palestine after a tortuous journey by land and sea. During April there came to Palestine the first groups of five Jewish boys from Bombay, India. 907 refugees from the Balkans arrived in Palestine during April and early May. In addition, 471 refugees from the Balkans arrived in Palestine in the preceding weeks.

Fifteen new Jewish settlements, most of them agricultural co-operative groups, will be formally established within the very near future, and refugees will be settled in these settlements, says the J.T.A.

Representatives of the Arab village of Sheikh Muwannis, which some time ago was incorporated in the Tel Aviv municipal area, addressed a message to Mayor L. Rohnch expressing their thanks to the Jewish Municipality for the "excellent treatment" accorded to them in all matters affecting the inhabitants. The [illegible] have recently announced. Dr. Roth said that the Nazis stored up in Munich large Jewish libraries as well as considerable booty of Jewish art treasures and archives which they had plundered throughout Europe. The Hebrew University is negotiating with the appropriate institutions of the United Nations in London with a view to securing these treasures after the war and transferring them to Palestine.

The Fishermen's Co-operative Colonies have been established in recent years along the sea-coast of Palestine are responsible for 37% of Palestine's total fishing catches, compared with 7% in 1939. The Jewish Agency Maritime Department disclosed that a Jewish National Shipping Company will be organized after the war. The establishment of fishing villages along the entire length of the seashore and the training of youth for seafaring are among the chief objectives of the post-war plan mapped by the Jewish Agency.

The 'Zionist Record,' of Johannesburg, South Africa, in a cable dispatch from Jerusalem, published details on the efforts of the [illegible] Chapman, head [illegible] and Tabenkin, from Nazi-occupied Poland to Palestine. The [illegible] who was known as a militant anti-Zionist, escaped the clutches of his persecutors moving about the globe of a Catholic priest, [illegible] his long journey. After [illegible] he succeeded in [illegible] Palestine.

Jewish Guerillas Fight Germans

When the Germans invaded the Soviet Union, a certain Jewish youth, whose name must remain unknown until his guerrilla detachment joins the Red Army, was in his last semester at the Medical School of Minsk University. The young man's parents were ill and it was impossible for the family to leave Minsk. When the Germans entered the city they set up a ghetto for Jewish citizens and threw the youth and his family into it. Soon afterward his mother died, and a few weeks later his father was arrested and shot. Within a short time the Hitlerites had massacred most of the Jews in Minsk, and the ghetto was closed.

As a medical student, the Jewish youth had been classified as a "specialist" by the Germans and assigned to a veterinary surgeon, who put him to work as a stableman. He was now transferred to the ghetto at Vilnius. Knowing that sooner or later he would be killed, he fled with seven young friends, also "specialists." The young Jews escaped into the forests near Vilnius. Here they met a guerrilla, who gave them food. He said there were many Jews hiding in the forests.

The boys offered to join the guerrilla detachment but the commander reminded them that they had no guns. "Get yourselves some arms the way we did," he told them, "and you will be welcome."

The eight young men took his advice. Unarmed, they attacked two German soldiers on a highway and thus got their first tommy gun and rifle. Next they had to learn how to use the arms, for these "specialists" had been students and not soldiers. A guerrilla was assigned to instruct them and in 10 days the boys had learned to shoot and hurl grenades. It was the young medical student's idea that they should form a detachment of Jewish guerrillas. They were soon joined by 11 more refugees from the ghetto.

Within a month all the young men were armed. They began to carry out dangerous operations and their fame spread. Many Jews who had taken refuge in the forests sought them out and joined their ranks. To the usual guerrilla's oath, the commander had added these words: As a son of the Jewish people, I vow always to remember all the sufferings which the Germans have inflicted on my people.

From the Vilnius Region the detachment moved to the Pinsk district. There in the dense forests and marshes it is operating today, with more than 200 fighters. And it is no longer the only Jewish detachment.

As a rule, people do not escape from the ghetto—they die there. And to the Germans the Jewish guerrillas appear as spectres returned from the dead. They call these Jewish detachments "Refugees from the Ghetto." In their plan for the total extermination of the Jewish people, the Germans have murdered hundreds of thousands. But the "Refugees from the Ghetto" will live. Those who have vowed "always to remember all the sufferings," know the sole means of deliverance from these sufferings.

CANADIAN FRIENDS Of The Hebrew University, toward Professor Isaiah W. Slotki speak at a dinner at the Mount Royal Hotel, given by Allan Bronfman, national president. Introducing the speaker, Mr. Bronfman cited the long term objective of the Hebrew University as "illumination of peace, illumination of culture, and illumination of unity." Lazarus Phillips, K.C., thanked the speaker, Dr. S. Lesinski, president of Montreal chapter, spoke. Emphasizing the help given to the United Nations by the University during the war, Professor Baron expressed the hope that the war would soon be over and the University could continue and intensify its work for the benefit of Jewry and mankind in general. The Hebrew University had taken a step forward in the direction of services rendered to mankind at large, and the light emanating from Zion had already illuminated Jewry in many parts of the world, he said. The only real light given to the world in recent years had come from cultural institutions, Professor Baron cited the contribution from the University in the field of scientific research leading to the extraction of agricultural foods in Palestine and other parts of the near east, and the aid given to the United Nations through methods of curbing tropical diseases. Stating that there was continued progress and expansion at the university, Professor Baron mentioned the fact that three new buildings had been added and added that there were now discoveries almost monthly in the [illegible] medical laboratory [illegible] by Jewish [illegible] of [illegible]

A Community Greets Its First Refugee Family

By Alison Bruce, in Toronto Saturday Night

This story really had its beginning several months ago, when various groups in one village were asked to give an enthusiastic welcome to Canada's first refugee family. In many cases the discussions were heated and very definite opinions were offered on both sides. Apparently, there were as many people against as for the question.

So when one of the village clergy was called out of his bed one Monday morning by a telephone call from Toronto, an S.O.S. to provide a temporary home for a family of five arriving the end of the week, he was at first dismayed and doubtful. But he made his voice hearty as he assured the person at the other end of the line that he would certainly do his best and that he was sure he would have no trouble at all. He was given particulars, the number of people in the family, ages, etc., and the approximate date of their arrival.

After a particularly heavy Sunday, the Rector was very weary and had been taking it easy that Monday morning, so he retired once more to his bed, to lie and pray with all his might. He felt the need of prayer because he remembered so vividly the hot discussions which had greeted some of these petition forms. He had a few doubts and misgivings. Not that he wasn't sure that the townsfolk in his community weren't fundamentally generous, but on Monday morning it was too easy to remember how most people hated to be stirred out of their comfortable, cosy way of life. After an hour shaved and dressed and proceeded to make some telephone calls.

The most encouraging of these was to a fellow member of the cloth, whose heartening voice, full of enthusiasm and willingness to help, came over the wire like a benediction. Soon his phone began to ring and before the day was over, through the efforts of three or four citizens, a furnished house had been provided for the family, a house which was to be at their disposal for at least a month, longer if they wanted it. (This was a miracle in itself, considering the housing shortage which exists in our village as in most other places.) A house where they could be by themselves, let down their hair, as it were, where they would be free to do as they chose.

By the next day, through many phone calls and through the kindness of many townsfolk, bedding and groceries were provided. Oil fires of coke and glad coal were soon poured in. A child's crib and a playpen were delivered to the house. Members of the Lion's Club set up two stoves and provided fuel and groceries. A sympathetic dressed the house and brightened it with crisp curtains of the windows and bright chintz covers on the chairs.

The two clerics went around to [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and line and occupied Europe who desire to belong to it." "No" was the answer to the subsection asking that the registrant state whether it is affiliated, associated, supervised, directed, controlled or financed by any government of a foreign country or foreign political party.

Also, in answer to a question, the registrant stated that no one could belong to the Hebrew nation who is a member of another nation or owes allegiance to it. It said further, in effect, that a Jew can't be a Hebrew if he happens to be a citizen of another country, such as the United States.

There was very little reference to Palestine in the document filed by the committee. The Jewish Agency for Palestine registered last year as the agent for the Jewish Agency for Palestine in Jerusalem, and claimed to be serving only Jewish interests in Palestine.

In answer to the question asking for names of persons responsible for the organization, the following names were submitted: Peter H. Bergson, 2315 Massachusetts Avenue, Washington; S. Merlin, 97 Park Avenue, New York; Theodore Ben-Nahum, 65 Central Park West, New York; Professor Pinkas Dellougas, 4736 Drexel Boulevard, Chicago; Eri Jabotinsky, now in Turkey; Arik Ben Eliezer, now in Palestine, and Captain Jeremiah Halpern, now in England.

In personal questionnaires Mr. Bergson gave his name as Hillel Kook, Palestinian citizen, born in Kruk, Lithuania; Mr. Merlin revealed his name was Shill Marlean, statesman, but born in Kishniv, Bessarabia, and Mr. Ben-Nahum revealed he had changed his name from Theodore Kopeilovitch and is a Palestinian citizen, but he did not state his birthplace. All three arrived in the United States in 1940. Such facts on the other four members were not submitted.

Coming in contact with real estate men in that way, he got into the business himself, and the foundation of his fortune was laid.

It took him twelve years to save his first $1,000, but after he had used it as a down payment on an old dilapidated house, which he painted and refinished himself, and rented every apartment in the place, things began to go more easily.

Not long after that, newspaper headlines announced that the historic Astor mansion at Fifth Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street had been bought by the former Polish immigrant boy for $3,750,000. The announcement caused a sensation, but Mr. Winter followed it up by buying in 1929 the Vanderbilt house at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-second Street for $4,000,000.

One of his more renowned deals was his purchase the same year of a group of apartments on Seventh Avenue between Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth Streets, known as the "Spanish Flats," for which he paid the New York Athletic Club $6,000,000. He soon resold about a half of the property for $4,000,000.

Late in 1928, Mr. Winter bought the Temple Emanu-El, an imposing Moorish edifice, at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, for $6,500,000, a transaction in which he turned over the site of the Astor mansion in part payment.

A month after he bought the Temple Emanu-El property, he sold the temple land to the Ward Baking Company. Later the Ward Company wanted to dispose of it and resold it to the realtor at a loss of $450,000. Mr. Winter sold the land again at a substantial profit.

Mr. Winter, who was president of the American Federation of Polish Jews, was extolled at the thirty-fifth convention of the organization at the Hotel Pennsylvania, which was called to formulate plans for the rehabilitation of Polish Jewry after the war and to demand the abolition of religious and racial discrimination "under a new Polish constitution."

Speakers confined their addresses for the most part to tributes to Mr. Winter, who had led in the planning of the convention and the formulation of its program. Telegrams from prominent Americans, received before Mr. Winter's death and all expressing sympathy for the plight of the Polish Jew and hope for his betterment, were read. Among the telegrams were those from President Roosevelt, Governor Thomas E. Dewey, Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior; Senators Robert F. Wagner and Alben Barkley; Representative Emanuel Cellar and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, one of the speakers, said Mr. Winter was "a fine example of the American immigrant who made his contribution to the upbuilding of American life."

The Jewish scouts in Palestine recently celebrated the 25th anniversary since their establishment as an organized group in the country. The organization now numbers many thousands of members. One of the major problems facing the scouts concerns their activity [illegible] [illegible] functioning in a number of co-operative colonies.

An exhibition depicting "Jewish Palestine At War" was recently opened in seething Piccadilly Circus under the auspices of the "British Association for the Jewish National Home," of which General Sir Wyndham Deedes is chairman. A correspondent of the "Zionist Review" who visited the exhibition describes the scene:

"Within a few yards of Eros one can see vivid reproductions of fountains playing in Tel Aviv's squares and boulevards. The panel photographs and models are so vivid that one can almost hear the clang of hammers in Jewish workshops—beating out a symphony of triumph over the desert, triumph over disillusionment in the face of disaster, triumph over despair, ignorance and prejudice."

Describing the reaction of British and American soldiers who visited the exhibition the correspondent writes: "Most of them seemed amazed." This was something new, something they had not comprehended before. They paused before a cut-out model showing the places where Palestinian Jews had fought and died, from Dunkirk to Bardia, El Alamein to Tunis, Crete, Greece and elsewhere.

"They paused before the picture of Brig. General Klech, Engineer-in-Chief of the 8th Army, and the smaller inset picture of his soldier's grave. One man's remark was in itself a revelation. He said 'I didn't know Klech was a Jew.'

"For the first time they see something of the contribution Jewish Palestine has made to the Allied war effort. Palestinian Jewish soldiers, Palestinian Jewish airmen and sailors, Palestinian ATS and WAAFS."

The first two Palestine restaurants, one Jewish and one Arab, serving food at cost price were recently opened in Jerusalem by the Government Food Controller. The restaurants are operated on the same lines as the British Government restaurants in the United Kingdom.

A grave problem of supply has been solved as a result of the discovery in large quantities of the special mica-sand needed for glass making. The Phoenicia Glass Factory in Haifa Bay has now gone into large scale production of their product. A new department has recently been installed to produce ampules for medical purposes.

Some 22 patents were granted to Palestine inventors in the past fiscal year. Heading the list are Tel Aviv inventors with 64 patents to their credit, followed by 26 for Haifa and 20 for Jerusalem.

The inventions cover a wide range of gadgets and machinery, including an electro-magnetically driven pump, improved furnaces, a process and apparatus for manufacturing dry sulphur dioxide, a machine for cutting the stalks of sholo, papyrus and like reeds into strips for use in making tropical hat skeletons, self-centering methods of preparing a fibrous material from banana plants and papyrus suitable for manufacturing building and insulating boards, cardboards and paper, improvements relating to diamond working machines, methods of decorating leather and leather goods, devices for indicating the position of moving ships and vehicles, a life-saving device, orthoptic apparatus, a process for the manufacture of sugar containing extracts from carob beans and a number of new building materials.

TORONTO MARRIAGES

Daniels-Wilks

The marriage of Sylvia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Wilks, 1084 St. Clair Avenue West, to Marvin David, son of Mrs. J. Daniels, 128 Raglan Avenue, and the late John Daniels, took place at Shaarei Shomayim Congregation on June 4 at five o'clock, Rabbi J. Burak officiating, assisted by Cantor A. Steinberg. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a gown of white net with lace insets, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, and full skirt finishing in a slight train. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion fell from a Queen Anne halo of the same lace as her gown, and she carried a cascade of white orchids, lilies-of-the valley, baby's breath, and bouvardia. Miss Ruth Fish, of St. Catharines, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor, in a street-length dress of pale blue crepe, with square neckline and draped skirt. She had a quilted Dutch cap, with matching shoulder-length veil, and carried a cascade of red roses. The bridesmaids were Mrs. L. Wolfe and Miss Mary Kopman in lilac color; and Miss Ruth Orr and Mrs. K. Morgan, in turquoise blue, their dresses fashioned like that of the maid of honor. They had matching headdresses and carried cascades of blending roses. Arthur Daniels, brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were: Milton Barenbaum, Bert Wilks, Captain Slater, Kenneth Morgan, and Manning Otis. Palms and baskets of roses on white pedestals decorated the synagogue, and Misses Bernice and Shay Salsm and Mrs. S. Wineberg, sisters, sang "Because." A dinner and reception followed. The bride's mother was in blue crepe, trimmed with embroidery, with corsage of roses, and the groom's mother wore black net and taffeta, with corsage of red roses. The couple spent their honeymoon in Muskoka, and will live in Halifax, N.S. For going away the bride wore a tomato-red gabardine suit and topcoat with black accessories. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. S. Fish, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. S. Mitchell and Mr. and Mrs. A. Norris, of Toledo, Ohio; and Mrs. S. Norris, of Los Angeles, Cal.

The Hunted Made Into People Again

By Abe B. Soltin

Hirsch wondered whether his wife had the same sudden thought that he had. Under his gray-white eyebrows he looked at her, up there in the women's gallery. She smiled to him; as always it was principally with her eyes.

Hirsch gripped the brown oak of the pulpit. It was his first aliyah, his first calling up to the reading of the Torah, in at least two years. What made the honor even more pleasurable was that it was Passover.

It was the feel of the wood that had generated that thought. Funny, Hirsch concluded, how the physical aspects of one's experiences rumbled about like divers in the skin of memory. That's it, just like divers. Divers were wood, weren't they? And it seemed as if wood . . . . . .

It was exactly a year ago — the the second day of Pesach. Hirsch had been given an aliyah then, too, but a somewhat different one. Then he wasn't standing among his people in solemn worship. His hands weren't gripping a pulpit. Instead, the palms were turned inward on the desk of the police commissioner in Madrid. Hirsch had come to ask for a time-extension to remain in Spain a little longer. When he and his wife, to escape Laval's deportations of Jews to Poland, had escaped from [illegible] they had seen [illegible] looking a gray foamy sea that swept rushingly back to where he had just escaped from. . . .

The aliyah came to an end. Hirsch vigorously said the appropriate prayer. With equal vigor he stepped around to the other side of the pulpit to make room for the next person being called up.

Again he felt the comforting touch of wood—the wood of his crutch that held up a leg amputated just below the knee. He no longer felt any pain, or even inconvenience. He was just happy now. It had been worth losing a leg during that cold crossing of the Pyrenees, when his limbs had frozen, to escape the hell of Nazi gas and torture chambers. It had been worth it to find out that there were people who came to you in your distress and who lifted you out of the pit from where there seemed to be no rescue.

Ten-year old Friedrich was idling outside the small Swiss synagogue. From time to time he could hear the hum of prayer, the cantor's voice. But he was more interested in the boys and girls playing ball on the sidewalk. Temptation to join them was great, yet Friedrich remembered his foster-mother's admonition to keep his new suit clean—at least today. Well, last year on Pesach [illegible] strong suit in a long line moving the Alpine road, kicking up a cloud of dust with their shuffling pace. Friedrich and his uncle drew up the rear.

"Go ahead with the others, Friedrich," his uncle said, seating himself wearily on a rock beside the road. "I must rest awhile."

"It's only five miles more to the Swiss border," Friedrich urged. "We can make it together, uncle."

In another three hours they were in Switzerland, hospitably received by the border police who told them, almost apologetically, that for reasons of national defense they would have to go to an internment camp.

Internment was not new to Friedrich. For two years he had played on the sandy French shore behind the barbed wire of an internment center. But the Swiss camp proved to be hardly a camp at all. It was confining, of course, but it was clean, and you could eat well—your stomach didn't turn at the sight of the food.

After two months in the camp a J.D.C. man came to talk with Friedrich and his uncle. He said that the J.D.C. had made arrangements to place a number of children in private homes. The J.D.C. would pay all expenses. That was one of the reasons why the Jews in the United States were contributing to the United Jewish Appeal. Would Friedrich like to be included in the group from this camp being placed?

An understanding glance between uncle and nephew was enough to give the J.D.C. man his answer.

Friedrich watched the game a moment longer, then he walked into the synagogue. He could wait until tomorrow to play ball. Besides, there wasn't much fun in playing with kids, you could beat, anyway.

Leo held the prayer-book in outlawed, sunburnt hands. His dark suit, several sizes too small, seemed to shut him under the [illegible] clothes. He frequently stopped his skipping forehead. Frankly, Leo was uncomfortable—not so much because this was the first time in many months that he had visited Santiago and the synagogue, but because he was no longer used to sitting with large numbers of people in a badly ventilated room. Last year he would not have minded at all, for until then he had spent the better part of his life indoors, in court-rooms, in his own and other lawyers' offices. But since last September when he had left Santiago for the farm in the province, he had become a "natural" man. Working under a hot sun behind the plow for twelve hours, he grew out of the confines of his former mode of existence.

He never would have come down this Passover if it were not for a vestige of consistency and curiosity to discover how he would react to the city after twelve months on the farm. Yes, it was just a year ago that he had set off with several companions for a colony. The J.D.C., which is represented together with the United Palestine Appeal and National Refugee Service in the United Jewish Appeal, had arranged for getting a number of young men and their families out of the city and on a sudden impulse, had taken advantage of the offer.

The first months had been hard. He had not minded the work so much as getting up at four in the morning. That, he thought at first, was an imposition but in a surprisingly short time he got used to that also. Soon, the farmer's pride in his crops, his livestock and his home—rough as it was—grew on him. He was happy. The bitter years in Germany were but dim memories.

Judaism And Democracy

By Dr. I. I. Mattuck, Rabbi, Of London, England

The Atlantic Charter and other declarations of the United Nations convey the assurance that their victory will be used to promote freedom for nations and individuals. It would, however, be unwise, when looking forward to the post-war world, to ignore the fact that there are forces at work against it. It will be necessary to restrict freedom in some directions if it is to be established and increased in others. If the national economy will have to be planned in order to establish for individuals the kind of freedom which requires social security, then the freedom of individuals in economic pursuits will have to be restricted. But I don't think that any really cogent arguments can be adduced from the religious point of view against restricting economic freedom for the sake of the common good.

There are, however, signs, even conspicuous signs, of a tendency opposed to political freedom and democracy. When the Nazis and Fascists are beaten the influence of their ideas will not end with their defeat. The historic factors which produced them have also affected some people in other countries who were congenitally unfriendly to the democratic idea. In the general eclipse of liberalism its political aspect too has been darkened.

According to Jewish teaching, freedom is an "inalienable right" of man. The story of the Exodus from Egypt and the frequent references to it affirm the right to freedom. It is responsible for the uneasy attitude to slavery shown in the Bible. At a time when slavery was practised throughout the world as a normal—and even a divinely ordained—element in social economy, the Biblical law commanded in the name of God, "Ye shall not be sold into slavery, for ye are my servants." From this attitude flowed the influences which finally abolished slavery in the civilized countries of the Western world. The principle that underlies the moral objection to slavery was responsible for the development of political democracy. It is the principle of respect for human personality, which is an integral part of the religious heritage of the western world, derived in part, directly and partly through Christianity, from Judaism. In theory, political democracy asserts that every mature human being has the right to say how and by whom he shall be governed.

The Jew, therefore, cannot for religious reasons be indifferent to any threat to democracy and to the fate of the political freedom which it embodies. But we must face the problem of the deficiencies and faults which it has shown in practice. The revolt against it was provoked by its failures. In so far as they were economic failures they can be remedied by economic controls within the democratic framework. But its main failure was moral. The extent of it is shown by the derogatory associations attaching to the words "politics", and "political" due to the methods used and motives brought into play in the working of democratic states. Let us face the fact that politics in the democracies have been reduced to competition between selfish interests for the opportunity to [illegible] fickleness in the economic field, but it has prevailed in the political field, showing itself even in the recent tendencies away from co-operation, which spring not from attention to selfish or material interests but from an earnest concern for the social good health of the nation. In some countries, however, the case is different even now, and it was different in all the democracies before the war. However ardent and firm our belief in political democracy, we must admit that it shows serious signs of moral weakness. The gravity of its moral condition was pointed by the tragic fact that the Nazis could use the machinery of democracy to fix their totalitarian yoke on the neck of the German people. The conclusion is inescapable that political democracy failed in the pre-war years in a way to rouse serious doubts about it, and that the ultimate cause of its failure was moral.

It is a truism that the exercise of freedom requires an adequate sense of responsibility. But responsibility to whom or to what? Judaism gave its answer long ago in the story of the exodus from Egypt. The demand which Moses put to Pharoah in the name of God was "Send out my people that they may serve me." Freedom is a condition for the service of God. But is not the converse also true? Service to God is a condition of freedom. Men are entitled to freedom only if they exercise it under the direction of a sense of responsibility to God. In Judaism freedom was combined with obedience to a divine law. The two are inseparable. From the Jewish point of view democracy has gone wrong because it broke away from its spiritual roots. That was why it was easy in some countries to put in its place slavery to the state. If we want to save political freedom it will have to be defined in the terms of the highest responsibility and directed by a high sense of responsibility in individuals.

The "era of the common man" can become a reality only if the common man in his millions realises the significance of his humanity with the duties it entails as well as the rights it confers. Many hope that the extension of the state educational system will produce a development towards that goal. Without in the least detracting from the importance of increased and extended education, it must be pointed out that the greater importance belongs not to the measure but the kind of education, not to its quantity but to its quality, not to the amount of learning it gives, but to the spiritual outlook it creates. Germany supplies a warning. It went as far as, if not further than, other countries in the extension of its educational system, but it would seem that its people were much, but not well, educated.

For its success democracy needs people who are inculcated with a due sense of moral responsibility. Freedom needs a law, not a law imposed from without but a law enforced from within, a law of which it may be said in the words of Deuteronomy, "It is not in heaven or across the sea that you should say: Who will fetch it for us; but it is in your hearts and mouths to do it," a law, as Jeremiah put it, "written in the heart." It is the sense of responsibility which springs from the knowledge of God and draws from faith in Him its impelling power.

A Single Drop Of Water

The New Republic says: President Roosevelt has now adopted the idea of free ports for refugees, first put forward by Samuel Grafton in The New York Post. One thousand European refugees will be admitted to the United States and maintained at Fort Ontario, Oswego, New York. Just as goods enter a free port without paying duty, provided they are reexported at a later date, these refugees will be permitted to stay for a time in this country regardless of passport and visa restrictions. This is a good idea; but why in the world should it be limited to one thousand, a tiny proportion of the refugees who are urgently in need of assistance? We take it for granted this is a trial balloon on the part of the President, to see what the public reaction is. We hope the public will now react by saying that to take a thousand refugees is about as humanitarian as giving a single drop of water to a man dying of thirst.

Lindbergh: Enemy Or Patriot?

By L. M. Birkhead, Of New York, National Director, Friends Of Democracy, Inc.

The following appeared in a letter to the New York Times:

Leaving aside Charles Lindbergh's assurance to Neville Chamberlain that the Luftwaffe was invincible—a mistake that led directly to Munich—let us see what Mr. Lindbergh stood for in this country and what he tried to do to his own people.

"The Germans . . . claim the right as an able and virile nation to expand—to conquer territory and influence by force of arms as other nations have done at one time or another throughout history."

Lindbergh urged a negotiated peace and assured us that Britain could not win no matter how much aid we gave her.

Lindbergh attacked the Jews in his speech at Des Moines, Iowa, saying that "the British, the Jews and the Roosevelt Administration" were pushing us into war. He added that the Jews' "greatest danger to this country lies in their large ownership and influence in our motion pictures, our press, our radio and our Government."

This is exactly in line with the German propaganda which told us that: "At the moment, Jews in certain countries may be fomenting hatred under the protection of a press, of the film, or wireless propaganda, of the theatre, of literature, etc., all of which they control." And, "All Roosevelt's actions have one purpose and one objective—to precipitate the United States people into a Jewish war and preserve the position of international Jewry."

This speech of Lindbergh's brought denunciation from American leaders. Wendell Willkie called it—"the most un-American talk made in my time by any person of national reputation."

Thomas E. Dewey said: "Charles A. Lindbergh, in a national broadcast, injected religious and racial prejudice into a discussion of our foreign policy. That, I believe, is an inexcusable abuse of the right of freedom of speech which 130,000,000 Americans, regardless of their views, will wholly reject."

Alfred E. Smith gravely reprehended that "Mr. Lindbergh has seen fit to inject anti-Semitism into his campaign against our foreign policy. It strikes at the very basis of our national unity and, if spread, would certainly be followed by most un-American elements in our population."

Lindbergh's un-American speeches were hailed with joy by Axis propagandists. The Japanese dropped leaflets with excerpts from his isolationist statements along with explosives and high explosives in an air raid on Chungking.

Central American German Consulates distributed mimeographed versions through the towns of their countries. Berlin broadcasts quoted him in English, German and Spanish. The Italian short wave praised him. While here at home the Bundists and the Coughlinites cheered and shouted their confusion, "Good American common sense," said the Deutscher Weckruf, official organ of the German-American Bund.

[illegible] (Lindbergh) has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat. . . ."

We feel that, regardless of Mr. Lindbergh's personal courage, which is not in question, the American people have the right and duty to continue to mistrust the man who endeavored to lead them astray and who has never in any way indicated that he was wrong or indicated repentance for his actions that might well have led this country to ruin.

WISE SAYS FASCIST PERIL CONCERNS POST-WAR WORK

publican, of Nebraska, said it appeared that economic abilities of the Jewish race had "caused the difficulty in Germany" and "I wonder if we don't face a similar situation here."

Dr. Wise declared that a similar situation was possible if American citizens failed to adhere to the fundamental precepts of democracy.

ITALIANS HELPED JEWS IN NAZI TERROR

was forbidden by the Germans to keep open its house of worship because the Jews were unable to pay the tribute demanded by the Nazis for that privilege.

The large stone temple on the Tiber was thronged for the service. Scores of American soldiers of Jewish faith were among the worshippers, many of them recently from the front.

One American soldier, Pvt. Joseph Robert Cerf, of Chicago, who has attended services in various cities throughout the African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns, said the beauty of this temple surpassed even that of the synagogue of Oran, which many have described as the finest they had seen.

There are fewer Jews in Rome than there were before the war. Temple officers said the Nazis had deported many.

The synagogue was closed from Sept. 9 until last Friday.

A proposal "to endanger the 200,000 Jews in France" for Vichy fear to M. Abetz was made by the Paris "L'Appel," in an editorial addressed to Gen. de Gaulle.
